CUE NOW

Presenter 2: Kia ora! Welcome to Taku Tohu where we explore how to make a mark and make the world a better place. I'm _____ Presenter 1: And I'm _____. Just as whoever combined pineapples and lumps forever altered our tastebuds, change happens when we take action to reimagine our world. Call it ground breaking! Change making! World shaking!

Presenter 2: On today's show - what does it take to change modern society? How does this compare to the past? First up, let's turn back the clock to the late 1800s.

INTRO TO B-ROLL

Presenter 1: 'You do not have the right to vote' Imagine being told that?! In the 19th century, New Zealand women were excluded from voting and politics, along with men under 21, lunatics, and criminals. Our great, great grandmothers were silenced. They were told by society - your role is cooking, cleaning, kids! Men are the ones to work, and they will decide how the country is run!

Unhappy with this, many women held meetings and lobbied parliament. They wrote to newspapers and distributed pamphlets. Demanding change, they called themselves the suffragists!

INTRO TO B-ROLL (continued)

Presenter 2: Back then, there were no cars, cell phones, or the Internet. You could get around by rail, steamship, horse, bicycle or you walked. Long distance communication was by electric telegraph, or writing a letter. Everything took a long time!

Let's take a look at how the peak of the suffrage campaign played out.

B-ROLL (Narration is pre-recorded. Students to act scene)

EXT. WGTN STREET

And here comes the petition! It's been a long race, up and down New Zealand but the suffragists haven't given up! With great pride and determination, the finish line approaches. [Crowd roar].

Just to the left you can see some opponents vying for attention.

"Families will be abandoned and the economy will be destroyed!"

"They'll ban alcohol next - I can't live without my pint of beer!"

INT. PARLIAMENT

Here it comes! It's the home stretch. All 500 sheets of paper, pasted together - 31,872 voices. VOTE! VOTE! VOTE!

And off it rolls!! What a race! What a finish! Well done!! First for New Zealand and the world – women get the vote. [Crowd cheer]

STORY ONE INTRO

Presenter 2: Amazing effort! I'm pleased to report that the law was passed. Women lined up, eager for the opportunity to cast their vote in the 1893 election.

Opponents had warned that delicate 'lady voters' would be jostled in polling booths by 'boorish men'. However, according one newspaper, 'the pretty dresses of the ladies and their smiling faces lighted up the polling booths most wonderfully'Delightful!

INTERVIEW ONE: Past Campaign—Womens Suffrage

Thanks _____. I'm _____ and I'm here with Kate Sheppard [and her supporters]. Incredible campaign out there!

Q1 Can you talk us through how you felt after the vote went through?

Q2 What motivated you to see women get the right to vote?

Q3 Tell us about some of the challenges you faced in trying to rally support?

Q4 Thinking about future generations, what advice to you have for others who also want to make a mark on society?

STORY TWO INTRO

Presenter 1: Today Kate is honoured as the face of our $10 note. New Zealand’s bold stance went on to inspire other suffrage movements throughout the world.

So what’s new? How do you make enough of a mark on society to get your face on a tenner these days?

Today, our voice has instant access to a global audience. But is it being heard? Is sharing really caring?

INTERVIEW TWO: Present Day Campaign

An interesting video! It's attracting a lot of attention online.

Q1 So _____, tell us, what is your campaign all about?

Q2 What's working well for your campaign? And what challenges have you faced so far?

Q3 Some have called you an 'armchair activist' or 'slacktivist' fronting your campaign in your pyjamas from behind your computer screen on the couch. How would you respond to that?

Q4 From what you've learnt, what advice do you have for others who also want to make their own mark?

PRESENTERS 1 & 2: Permanence / Impermanence

Presenter 1: Thanks _____. Now for a different angle. What happens to our mark once it's been made? How do we preserve our mark, or is it preserved for us? Let's look at the Treaty of Waitangi, signed in 1840.

Presenter 2: The Treaty documents, made of two sheets of animal skin, and nine of paper, were securely preserved in an iron box in the Auckland government offices.

Presenter 1:But in 1841, the building was destroyed by fire!

Presenter 2: Yes! But the box was rescued out of the fire by a Records Clerk. What a hero! Then the documents were safely put – in a safe.

Presenter 1: ...But the documents disappeared for the rest of the century!

Presenter 2: Well, yes... But – they were eventually rediscovered in the basement of the Government Buildings in 1908!

Presenter 1: ...And when they were found they were water damaged.... and partly eaten by rats...!!!

Presenter 2: Well TODAY the Treaty has been successfully restored. It's kept under low-level LED lighting at the National Library of New Zealand, in fireproof cases, inside one of the safest places in the country in an earthquake. Whew, let's all breathe a sigh of relief!! The founding documents of our country are safe!

STORY THREE: Intro

Presenter 1: So that's a lot of work to preserve a mark!

What about today? Let's talk about the day-to-day marks you choose to make online.

Nowadays, whatever we say, share or endorse online becomes a permanent part of the virtual world!

....Slightly scary! What happens if I change my mind? Can I undo..??!!

INTERVIEW THREE: Yeah, Nah, Why?

Thanks. I'm _____ and joining me now are _____ and _____. It's time for... 'Yeah! Nah! Why?!'

Today, we're asking some young people of _____ [town] what they think about modern mark making. I'm going to present a series of questions, with which they'll either agree or disagree with, and tell us why.

Q1 First question _____
Yeah, or Nah?
 [THUMBS UP, OR THUMPS DOWN]
Why do you think that? [ASK BOTH PEOPLE]

Interesting!

Q2 Now the second question _____
Yeah, or Nah?
Why do you think that?

Thought-provoking!

Q3 Third question _____
Yeah, or Nah?
Why do you think that?

CAT'S OUT OF THE BAG INTRO

Presenter 2: Some very interesting thoughts there! Next we head over to our reporter _____ with a story that is going to let the cat-out-of-the-bag! A cautionary 'tail' about what can happen to a mark made online – whether you like it or not!

CUE NOW

CATS OUT OF THE BAG STORY

Thanks _____. Today, we’re focusing on the recent sad example of Flufferton. From the small town of Levin, Flufferton accidentally shot to fame after his owner posted a series of photos of him wearing a very cute hat and scarf - all to prove that cats CAN in fact wear hats.

However, his photo spread much further than expected, and after a week had reached 1.8 million likes! Flufferton was making the paw-print on society he’d always dreamed of!

Before long, he had a spin-off merchandise line that was flying off the shelves - ‘Copy Cat in Hats’.

Let’s look at some of his followers now. [PAUSE].

But...it wasn’t long before the haters started hating...the cat-calling began, along with the creation of memes, and stalking.

Lately, Flufferton been snapped by paparazzi acting very strangely. It’s believed he has had a breakdown and has shaved off all his fur!!! He’s rumoured to be hooked on catnip, and things have gone from bad to worse.

How sad....So what does all this say about the state of society today?

Take care, with what you share!! I’ll leave you to ponder that New Zealand.
